Carly Ringlespaugh's government affairs and regulatory practice is built around a deep understanding of her clients' needs so that she can anticipate relevant opportunities and challenges as they develop in the fast-paced and quick-twitch political arena. Seasoned and well-versed in both the Indiana executive and legislative branches, Carly's insight into the processes and players impacting business on a local, state, and national scale position her to help navigate her clients through the churning rapids of lobbying, law development, and passage so that they may achieve their most important business goals.

On the regulatory side, Carly has deep insight into myriad complex spaces, counseling clients in the healthcare, public infrastructure, gaming, and cannabis spheres, among others.

A natural bridge-builder and attentive listener and communicator, Carly keeps her finger on the pulse of not just what's happening in Indiana—but what is coming just beyond the horizon. Keeping clients informed and meeting them where they are remain core tenets of her commitment to client service.

She is equally committed to her community, and regularly participates in pro bono opportunities through Ice Miller.

Carly previously served as an intern at Ice Miller while working toward her juris doctor from Indiana University Robert H. McKinney School of Law. During her time in law school, Carly received recognition for pro bono hours as a Court Appointed Special Advocate and as a Guardian ad Litem. Additionally, she earned a certificate in Advocacy Skills.

Prior to attending law school, Carly graduated from Purdue University. While at Purdue, Carly was a legislative intern for the Indiana House of Representatives. Additionally, she participated in the Lex Fellowship, based in Spain, where she learned about various types of legal practices and how legal systems vary across the globe.
